Topic: “Crisis”

Written by: Camila Ruiz

Writer's note:

Hi there! This is an advanced futuristic committee, as you may know! I wanted you to be aware that this topic is entirely fictitious, although it takes place in the future and on our planet. Since most of this material cannot be available anywhere else, I highly advise you to carefully read this guide. If you were chosen to represent a country whose perspective in the crisis is hard to know, please feel free to visualize how your country will approach the solution in the future using your imagination and creativity. Best of luck!

I. ABOUT THE COMMITTEE

INTERPOL IS is known as the biggest international law enforcement agency in the world. Driven by its Member States, its mission and operations are distinct from those of other international organizations. To support its three primary crime programs—counterterrorism, cybercrime, and organized and emergent crime—INTERPOL offers various policing knowledge and capacities.

Since 1996, INTERPOL has profited from a unique position as a Permanent Observer at the United Nations. This status, which was initially created by General Assembly Resolution 51/1, was confirmed in 1997 with a Cooperation Agreement.

INTERPOL, an international body with administrative authority, assists nations in cooperating to combat international criminal activity. Interpol officials cannot detain suspects or take action without the consent of national authorities since they lack governmental authority. In this sense, Interpol functions more as an administrative organization than an executive one. To assist the national authorities in combating transborder crime, Interpol offers support and tools to its member states.

II. CONTEXT

In this advanced committee, delegates will be facing a special crisis that will be taking place in 2054. Delegates are welcome to bring a laptop or an iPad to investigate this crisis deeply in committee sessions. In the end, delegates will come to a solution to the crisis, which is going to be a big international crime delegates must solve.
